

Zoning Rewrite Raises Alarm About Municipal Authority

by Kathleen Gallagher

Work by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) Planning Division on rewriting the Prince George's County Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations started in 2014 and will be completed in 2017. Many public presentations and briefings have been conducted countywide by M-NCPPC planning department staff, including an update for the Greenbelt City Council on Module 2 of the rewrite by Chad Williams, project manager for the rewrite, at a worksession on August 17.

The zoning ordinance is decades out-of-date and has become overly long, complicated and difficult to interpret, in part due to its many amendments. In addition to updates, a primary goal of the rewrite is to simplify and streamline both the document and the review process for applications and approvals. The latter was identified early on by municipalities as a two-edged sword, a topic that was prominent at this worksession.

While the city council and other municipal officials generally support the simplification of the ordinance and regulations, they do not wish to see the administration and review process streamlined to the extent of undermining necessary and appropriate municipal and other public review. Thus far, this concern has not been addressed by the county.

A second concern that the city council wants to have the opportunity to consider in greater detail is the categorization of areas as being inside or outside the Beltway. Although Greenbelt straddles the Beltway, it is categorized in the rewrite as if it were entirely inside, which has both pros and cons that are not entirely clear.

Rewrite Schedule

Outlining the schedule to date, Williams said Module 1, which covers the proposed new zones and land uses, was released in October 2015. Module 2 came out in the spring and deals with design and subdivision standards, including adequacy of public facilities. Module 3, dealing with the process and administration of zoning and subdivision regulations, is due to be out by September 1, which is also the "best consideration" deadline for comments on Module 2, although comments will still be accepted after that date. The "best consideration" deadline for Module 3 comments will be November 1.

The subsequent steps will include testing the code to see if it works as planned by trying it out on eight cases, which will be selected by the end of August, with results to be presented by October or November. Over the same period, a focus group of developers will be consulted for their input on why they do or do not undertake development in the county. By the end of the year or early 2017, project staff will consider all the feedback received from municipalities, other groups and individuals, make revisions and release a comprehensive document for further review and comment prior to forwarding legislation to the county council.

Festival Highlights: Sunday and Monday

Greenbelt Labor Day Festival runs from Friday evening through Monday afternoon. The events of Friday and Saturday were highlighted in last week's News Review but take a deep breath, the Festival continues.

Sunday

The Tour de Greenbelt bike ride starts at 9 a.m. at the New Deal Café. The ride is in two parts. The first part goes to the new Greenbelt Station neighborhood. The second stage leaves at 10 a.m., again from the Café, and goes to Schrom Hills Park. The second stage may not be suitable for families with small children due to busy roads.

Back in Roosevelt Center, the craft fair Festival.

opens at noon and runs until 8 p.m. The carnival and booths open at noon and run until 10 p.m.

If you still have energy – or have kids with energy – there is a Youth Table Tennis Tournament (singles only) starting at noon. The Hot Shot Hoops is scheduled from 2 to 4 p.m. Hoop participants, 12 and under, will have two minutes to make as many shots as they can within a half-court area. The Two Ball Tournament starts at 4:15 p.m. (registration at 3:45 p.m.). This tournament is for youth ages 13 and older.

And for those indefatigable Festival goers, the Larry Noel 15K Race and 3K Fun Run will start on Northway at the parking lot for the former St. Hugh's School. The race is hosted by the D.C. Road Runners Club.

ERHS Students Form Bonds, Win Awards at Convention

by Matthew Moore

On July 24, five students from Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) joined 12 more Maryland students and set out for the National Junior Classical League (NJCL) convention at Indiana University in Bloomington. We piled into two vans and set out on a 650-mile journey through five states over two days, all to be part of 1,558 students and chaperones from 31 different states, from California to Maine, Texas to North Dakota, celebrating the culture of the classical world. As one delegate, Jenny Bo, put it, "Going to NJCL convention was the best decision I made. Throughout a week's worth of time, I met some of the most wonderful people."

The NJCL is an umbrella organization, comprised of hundreds of clubs in elementary schools, middle schools and high schools throughout the country, Greenbelt Celebrates First Zero-Waste Week in Sept.

by Erin Josephitis and Susan Barnett

Suzy Q. finishes the last drop out of her plastic soda bottle, flattens it out, puts the plastic cap back on and gets up to throw it into the recycling bin. Suzy Q. tries to recycle as much as possible because she knows it is important for environmental sustainability. In Greenbelt and across the U.S., the total amount of recycling has increased over the past several decades. Luckily, Greenbelt uses a single stream process, which means that the materials do not need to be separated by cardboard, glass or plastic.

Greenbelt's first Zero-Waste Week, September 1 to 7, 2016, brings awareness to the importance of recycling and how it makes a significant impact on the problem of waste in our community. Diverting waste away from the landfill and recovering resources by recycling are prime goals of a zero-waste approach. Prince George's County has recently decided to steer toward a zero-waste approach and the Green Team's Zero-Waste Circle celebrates this along with the community's successful history of recycling.

Despite small fluctuations, Greenbelt's diversion rate has been on a positive trend over the last decade. In fact, Greenbelt's average diversion rate of 54 percent over the past decade is greater than the national average of 34 percent. Way to go, Greenbelters! Take a look at our numbers: from 2003 to 2015, Greenbelt's overall trend in recycling has been positive and the tons of disposed landfill trash have been on a steady decrease for more than a decade. The commingled residential curbside recycling was highest from 2003 to 2007 and fluctuated at lower rates from 2008 to 2015. As the economy recovered in 2012, the total overall tons of recycling decreased while tons of landfill trash rose slightly. This trend demonstrates greater consciousness of resources during periods of economic stagnation, and decreased resource recovery during economic growth. Why can't we do the right thing all the time?

Despite Greenbelt's impressive diversion rate, many citizens are unaware of what happens after their recycling gets taken out of

Letters to the Editor

Nice Article

What a pleasure it was to read Sue Krofchik’s article on Maria Wyman’s Beauty Salon (front page, August 25). Her clever opening allusion to the movie Field of Dreams, “If you build it, he will come,” and the end story of Maria touching Elvis’ hair were nicely done!

Have a Hearing-Safe Labor Day Festival

Unfortunately, some feel that Festival bands should be loud enough so that they can be heard at prominent sound levels throughout the carnival area. Because of this, the listening even at 20 to 50 feet from the stage will sometimes be unsafe for more than 15 minutes. For most bands it’s best to stay away from the bleachers and nearby areas entirely, especially if you already have hearing damage, are pregnant or have an infant or child with you, or if you are under 18, since at these ages one’s hearing system is not yet fully developed.

In a perfect world all parents would recognize unsafe hearing environments. However, believe it or not, many young parents, primarily because they are young, generally tend to know less about child safety. I feel that it is our duty as older folks to notify these young parents when we see their children in hazardous situations. We should not depend on letters to the editor, or persons sitting at tables with flyers.

At last year’s Festival I saw perhaps a total of 25 children dancing near the stage to the music of the bands, and some dancing even within one foot of some of the huge speakers on the ground, and I notified parents of the hazard, whenever I could find them.

Ear plugs can be helpful, but they are not easy to install correctly so that they will be effective and safe. This should be practiced before one comes to the Festival. If you cannot talk with others without shouting, then you are in a hearing-hazardous area. And if you believe that a band is too loud for you or your child to safely be seated close enough to watch how performers display their art, please say something to an event manager at the information booth.

Meanwhile, search “safe hearing charts” and “protecting children’s hearing” and discuss with any young parents, teens and children you know.

Tick Safety

As we look forward to the Labor Day holiday and spending time with our family outdoors, I wanted to remind everyone to check for ticks after coming in. Some of you may be thinking, it is the end of summer why should I worry about ticks? Two words to consider: Lyme disease.

According to MedlinePlus.gov, most Lyme disease infections occur in the northeastern states, from Virginia to Maine.

Although few people contract Lyme disease, the bacteria can spread to the brain, heart and joints if treatment isn’t administered. The first symptoms include fever and chills, ill feeling, headache, muscle and joint pain or a stiff neck. Secondary symptoms that can occur weeks later include numbness or pain in the nerve area, paralysis or weakness in the muscles of the face, heart problems, such as skipped heartbeats (palpitations), chest pain or shortness of breath. However, even severe complications in most cases can be cured with treatment.

I know firsthand about the complications of a tick bite. Just after July 4 this year, I pulled a tick off of my back. The bite became infected and I became very sick. An ounce of prevention could have prevented a pounds worth of cure.

Tick prevention includes wearing light clothing so a tick can be easily spotted, wear long pants tucked into socks and long-sleeved shirts, apply pest repellent to body and clothes, upon returning home remove all clothing, check for ticks, shower and wash hair.

What to do if you have a tick on your body:

Grasp the tick close to its head or mouth with tweezers. Do not use your bare fingers. If needed, use a tissue or paper towel.

Pull it straight out with a slow and steady motion. Avoid squeezing or crushing the tick. Be careful not to leave the head embedded in the skin.

Clean the area thoroughly with soap and water and wash your hands thoroughly.

Save the tick in a jar.

Watch carefully for the next week or two for signs of Lyme disease.

If all parts of the tick cannot be removed, get medical help. Bring the tick in the jar to your doctor.

Enjoy the holiday and be safe.

More On The Sommers Brothers

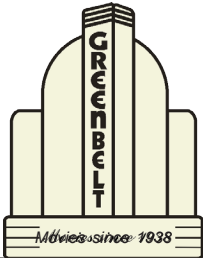

In my article about Bob Sommers and his family in last week’s paper, a part about the oldest of the four brothers, Brother James of the Holy Cross Abbey in Berryville, Va., was left out. Brother James died in December 2011 at Carroll Manor in Washington, D.C. He was buried at the monastery in Berryville where he had served for many years.

All four Sommers brothers served our country in the military during World War II: James in the Army infantry in Europe before entering the monastery, Bob as an Army paratrooper and Richard (Dick) in the Marines. The name of William Sommers, who died in 1943 while serving in the Navy in the South Pacific, is engraved on the memorial in Roosevelt Center which honors Greenbelt veterans who died in WWII.

In Memoriam

A Memory of Charlie Howey

by Shalom Fisher

Charlie and I lived near each other in GHI as youngsters. I was a few months older than Charlie, and a grade ahead, due to the school calendars. We were chums at ages, I suppose, 8 to 12 years old, and sometimes we would quarrel. We would fool around; Charlie liked to joke and laugh. We used to go bicycling, play softball or football in the fields nearby, walk around the lake and sometimes go camp-ing. Sometimes we would sleep out, laying our sleeping bags on blankets in the yard on the hot summer evenings. There were few mosquitos, as I recall. Of course we didn't have air conditioning. In fact, a big event was when we installed an exhaust fan in an upstairs bedroom. The sky and air were clear. With no air pollution and no light pollution we would see the Milky Way on a clear night.

Obituaries

The News Review publishes obituaries of Greenbelt residents, past or present.

You write it or we will if you prefer. We try to include information about participation in various activities and organizations, where the person lived and something about the family. A photograph and service information should be included. There is no charge.

Once, his father took us both to the beach in his jeep. It was quite a treat; we floated on inner tubes and had water fights.

Charlie was very handsome and girls used to walk by in hopes of seeing him. Quite a few times, one very cute girl even rode her bicycle by his house although she lived several blocks away. I was very jealous.

Charlie was very competitive and could throw a good punch. I was not surprised to read that he had joined the Marines.

The last time I saw Charlie was many decades ago. He told me that his wife was pregnant with their first child. He was most happy and proud of this. I was blown away because I was a sophomore in college and was struggling to get dates!

I was very sorry to read that Charlie had passed away and I wish his family the best.

each one a part of its state chapter. The NJCL is dedicated to the idea of encouraging and spreading enthusiasm for the world of Greece and Rome and the lessons that world has to teach us. As the NJCL creed states, "We believe an acquaintance with the civilization of Greece and Rome will help us understand and appraise this world of today, which is indebted to ancient civilization in its government and laws, literature, language, and arts."

ERHS students Haizhao (Jenny) Bo, Edward Brennan, Grace D'Eustachio, Julian Pitts and alumnae Katharine Toth and Elizabeth Troiano joined students from Dulaney and Easton High Schools to form the Maryland delegation to the NJCL convention (MDJCL). During the week, they took part in certamen (a type of quiz bowl), submitted art and handicrafts as a part of the graphic arts contests, competed in Ultimate Discus (frisbee) and swimming, attended colloquia led by professors from Indiana colleges and had a chance to share their love for Latin and the classics with other students from across the country.

From all of these activities, ERHS students came home with a large number of awards. Toth led her scavenger hunt team, comprised of members from other delegations, to a first place triumph, and later earned a 10th place medal for her MDJCL scrapbook entry. Pitts, D'Eustachio, and Brennan took part in the swimming event in the Olympika, and Pitts earned a 5th place finish. Bo was one half of a pairs costume entry, Scylla and Carybdis, and took 10th place. Together, the MDJCL delegation won 2nd and 3rd place in spirit on two separate days.

But it wasn't all about competition. Most found that the feeling of community from being part of the NJCL convention was the greatest gift of their experience. According to Toth, the chance to get to know the other delegates from Maryland was something that would stay with her. "I started out knowing my Roosevelt people and some of the Easton people, but by the end of one week, I had gotten to know those people so much better, and I had tightly bonded with everyone I hadn't even known before." Brennan agreed, saying, "The most satisfying and wonderful thing about the convention is seeing 18 individuals through the course of a single week become a family."

Troiano sums the whole experience best: "NJCL convention is one of those things that you need to experience before you can truly understand it. I had been told so often by everyone at Roosevelt who had been before that it was amazing, so I knew I wanted to give it a shot. The convention ended up far exceeding my expectations and reminding me why I love Latin and classical study so much. NJCL is not just about language, culture, mythology and history – it's about friendships. NJCL has brought me in contact with so many other classics lovers who actually enjoy things like going to talks about mythology in science fiction or doing cheers about King Midas. It's bringing classical study into the modern day and making it relevant and fun. Overall, it was a wonderful experience that I highly recommend to anyone interested in classics. My only complaint is that I wish I had gone sooner."

And Bo agrees with her: "It was seriously the (most) fun time I had in the longest time. I am definitely going to the NJCL convention in Troy University next year!"

Matthew Moore is on the faculty at ERHS.

Because Module 2 deals mostly with regulations affecting new development and possibly redevelopment, it has been of somewhat less concern to Greenbelt than other areas, such as what zoning or overlay will be put in force to protect the city’s historic area, including Greenbelt Homes, Inc., and the upholding of municipal authority in the “process and administration” of zoning as set forth in Module 3 and as described by omission in Module 2.

Williams reviewed the items included in Module 2. Neighborhood compatibility standards protect existing neighborhoods of single-family and two-family homes by establishing standards for appropriate transitions to such types of new development as non-residential, mixed use, multi-family and townhouses.

Also applicable only to new development are green building standards and green building incentives for features beyond the minimum required. Other standards include those for private open space set-asides; roadway access, mobility and circulation; multi-family, townhouse and three-family development; non-residential and mixed use development; and large retail development.

Other revised standards covered in Module 2 include those for off-street parking and loading, fences, walls, signage, lighting and agricultural compatibility. Council was pleased to hear that new standards are being developed for electronic signs. The landscape manual is being completely reviewed, with the suburban part completed and the rural and urban segments underway.

Public Facility Adequacy

Regulations for adequacy of public facilities (APF) have been revised to exclude fire and rescue. They include transportation, water, sewer, police, parks and schools. A beneficial change is that APF certification is now good for only a limited time before development, with the result that a revised application will be required to continue it. Currently an APF certification can be used indefinitely, no matter how much may have changed.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts questioned reductions in APF standards, saying increased population brought costs to municipalities, but Williams said there had been court cases nationally that militated against the inclusion of some items.

Staff Response

Mayor Emmett Jordan asked Celia Craze, the city’s director of planning and community development, to review the staff analysis to be provided to M-NCPPC on Module 2. In a memorandum, she had identified as a major staff concern the change to the APF regulations that would make the process of determining adequacy an administrative process instead of the current process that incorporates APF assessment as part of a development review process, typically subdivision. According to Craze, that change results in “eliminating public review and participation in the evaluation determination of APF.”

Williams responded that Clarion, the consulting firm developing the draft ordinance, states that adequacy determination is rarely a public process since “it’s about math.” Councilmember Judith Davis objected to that interpretation. She also inquired about the absence of incentives for affordable housing, which Williams said was because they have been waiting to receive the county’s policy on affordable housing.

Overall, Craze cited a “lack of recognition of municipal interests and municipal authority.” She reviewed the summary list of 14 major items prepared by staff, which she said reflects issues previously expressed by the city council about the elimination of public review, the role of municipalities in the zoning process and the status of the departure and variance authorities that are currently delegated to the city.

With regard to the latter, it appears that authority to waive or modify requirements of the zoning ordinance would be given to the county planning director. In the cities of Greenbelt, College Park and Bowie, these authorities currently reside with the municipalities. In addition, Craze said there would be no notification to neighbors and no public review process. Davis commented that matters would now be decided between the owner and the planning director.

Williams said these matters would be addressed in Module 3, but Craze said their treatment is included in detail in Module 2, so she is concerned at this point. She added that, as written, one must assume there is no public review.

“The goal is to simplify, streamline,” she said, “but you sacrifice public process when you do that.”

Another area of concern involves treatment of roadways by the county in setting standards for traffic-calming devices on roads that would become municipal roads. According to Craze, the zoning ordinance oversteps its authority on this matter since these decisions are the province of the public agencies with operational and maintenance responsibility over the roads in question.

Objections were also raised to inclusion of property maintenance requirements in the ordinance, which, according to Craze, would be in direct conflict with Greenbelt’s code enforcement.

A number of items not addressed in the APF regulations were cited, including consideration of municipal police in the assessment of adequacy and the mitigation of impacts.

The staff memo also raises the issues of categorizing the entire City of Greenbelt as inside the Beltway. Areas outside the Beltway were developed on suburban design standards, whereas under the revised zoning ordinance the development standards applied to areas inside the Beltway reflect a greater density.

Council asked Craze to provide more information about this subject for later discussion. According to Williams, Clarion placed Greenbelt entirely inside the Beltway because that was where it was classified in the 2001-2002 planning documents and because they wanted the city to remain cohesive.

After some discussion of the contents of a letter to come to council for approval to send to M-NCPPC, council expressed its appreciation to Williams for his presentation and information.

GCAN Kicks Off Fall

The theme of the Greenbelt Climate Action Network’s (GCAN) first gathering for the fall is Looking Back, Looking Forward.

On September 7, GCAN will discuss recent developments this summer (fracking, zero waste, community solar) and discuss its focus for the fall. Which climate solutions are of most interest: Energy? Agriculture? Transportation? Waste? Where should local advocacy efforts be focused? How will “resilience” be practiced as climate change intensifies? How to maintain a healthy – even joyful – mental attitude through it all? Join GCAN for a lively discussion and planning session.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, September 7, from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Community Center, Room 114. For more information, email or call Lore Rosenthal, lore@simplicity-matters.org, 301-345-2234.

Well Baby Program Registration Begins

The program will begin Thursday, September 22 and run through Thursday, December 15. Visits will occur twice a month on Thursdays between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Beginning Thursday, September 15, student nurses will call program participants to schedule their specific time slots. Residents who keep all of their appointments will be eligible for a special prize at the end of the program. To register, contact Sharon Johnson, GAIL program case manager, at 240-542-2029. Explore Your Greenbelt

Helping Greenbelt's Hungry

by Carol Griffith

Many of us don't know what it's like to be hungry, fortunately, but some in our city do. How does Greenbelt assist those who struggle with hunger and food insecurity?

In its Explore Your Greenbelt campaign, the Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) is highlighting those groups that have been previously awarded a grant as they continue their work. This month, St. Hugh's Food Pantry, supported by the Ladies of Charity of St. Hugh of Grenoble Catholic Church, are featured as they plan for their Bingo Nights event each evening of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, September 2, 3 and 4. In the Bingo Nights, the Ladies of Charity raise money and accept food donations to support the St. Hugh's Food Pantry. The pantry helps to bridge the financial gap when families face income shortages through no fault of their own.

The pantry provides the ingredients for three meals a day for about a week, utilizing accepted guidance on proper nutrition for adults and children in a confidential and respectful manner. The pantry serves to up to 15 families a week. Any donated food that the Ladies of Charity are unable to use in the pantry is passed along to So Others Might Eat in Washington, D. C.

One family was willing to share for this article its story of how appreciative the family is of the supplemental food from the pantry. Ms. C has three children ages 9, 12 and 15 and an extremely tight budget. She works several jobs to make ends meet and none of the jobs have benefits such as sick leave. If one of her children is sick, Ms. C loses a day's pay to stay home. Frequently, her hours at work are cut back without any notice and her paycheck is short. These situations make balancing a budget very difficult and the food budget is the first item to be affected when Ms. C's paycheck is less than needed. If rent and utilities aren't paid first the family faces eviction or utility cut-offs. The children were particularly in need of food this summer when they did not have access to the meals they would normally receive at school.

Mary Jo Dorsey stocks the shelves of St. Hugh's food pantry.

Food Insecurity
The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) defines food insecurity as "limited or uncertain availability of nutritionally adequate and safe foods or limited or uncertain ability to acquire acceptable foods in socially acceptable ways." Food security includes such factors as proximity to restaurants and food stores, any food assistance programs in the community and the financial resources of a family. On its website, USDA maintains two atlases that track in different ways the access to food in a community by census tracts. USDA doesn't, however, count the number of hungry people in an area.

Although the city does not keep statistics on the food needs of its residents, Dr. Elizabeth Park, director of Greenbelt CARES, estimates that in fiscal year 2016 the organization received 60 requests for assistance, some of which included a need for food. Greenbelt CARES often refers those needing food to the St. Hugh's Food Pantry. Dr. Park sees "a great need" for food items to be donated to residents in need. Those in need are found in all age groups.

In other ways to prevent hunger, the city partners with the Capital Area Food Bank to offer free produce each month at Springhill Lake Elementary School or Green Ridge House. Approximately 50 to 100 people receive free produce. The city also participates in the Brown Bag program, which provides supplemental food to approximately 50 low-income seniors, and serves 30 to 50 meals each day in a summer food program for children that offers lunches three days a week at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

Pilot Program
In addition to the Bingo Nights at the Labor Day Festival, the Ladies of Charity, with the Co-op Supermarket, have instituted a pilot program in which shoppers may purchase a bag of food at a discount to be provided to the St. Hugh's Food Pantry. So far over 200 bags of food have been donated through this program. Generosity in these fundraising events would be greatly appreciated by our neighbors struggling with food insecurity.

The Ladies of Charity Bingo Nights event is part of the Explore Your Greenbelt campaign of the GCF to celebrate its tenth anniversary, sponsored by the Greenbelt News Review, Paradyme Management and Beltway Plaza. Explore Your Greenbelt is a series of 14 monthly events and activities that will feature organizations that have received GCF funding.

Bring food to donate and drop off at the Ladies of Charity Bingo Nights each evening of the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, September 2, 3 and 4, and stop by the GCF information table, Saturday, September 3, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to learn about how GCF lives out its mission of nourishing all of Greenbelt's neighborhoods. Enter a free drawing at the table to win prizes. No purchase is necessary.

Give Blood Here

During National Preparedness Month in September, the American Red Cross encourages eligible donors to give blood to help ensure a readily available blood supply for emergencies. Whether blood is needed for a chronic condition such as sickle cell disease, a routine surgery, a traumatic accident or a large-scale emergency, it's the blood already on the shelves that helps save lives. Donors of all blood types are needed.

Donations typically decline around summer holidays like Labor Day. To thank those who come out to give during September 2 to 6, the Red Cross is providing a branded duffel bag while supplies last.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). Donors are encouraged to make appointments and complete the RapidPass online health history questionnaire at redcrossblood.org/rapidpass to help reduce wait times.

Two blood drives will take place soon in Greenbelt: September 9, from 12:30 to 6 p.m. at the Community Center, and September 12, from 1:30 to 7 p.m. at Greenbelt American Legion Post 136.
